(54) TRANSPARENT CONDUCTIVE SUBSTRATE AND ORGANIC ELECTROLUMINESCENT ELEMENT USING THE SAME

(57) Abstract:

PROBLEM TO BE SOLVED: To give a filter function to an organic electroluminescent element without using an after-fitting filter by forming a transparent conductive film colored with the coloring material and having a filter function on a transparent substrate.

SOLUTION: A transparent conductive film on a transparent substrate is formed by using a normal transparent conductive material. As a desirable transparent conductive material, oxide of one or more kinds among In, Zn and Sn is used. As a material for coloring the transparent conductive film, a normal inorganic or organic material can be used, and quantity of addition thereof is appropriately set in response to the wavelength characteristic as a filter of the transparent conductive film and concentration thereof. In order to make the transparent conductive film effectively function as a filter, transmittance of the light having wavelength at 500 nm is desirably set at 70% or less. In the case of forming the transparent conductive film on the substrate, vapor phase epitaxy is desirable, and a mask having the predetermined pattern is used so as to form the pattern of the transparent conductive film.
